

5

Food Products concerning Halal and Haram (Permitted & Prohibited)♦

- 1- Food products should guarantee health and human life. But it is most unfortunate that some persons and companies engaged in the manufacturing and supply of food product; don't observe the norms and specification of their food products which are required under the hygienic rules. Similarly adulterated food products and other products of common use are marketed. It is a betrayal and breach of trust on the parts of these suppliers. The persons responsible to manufacture these products are therefore, urged to observe the rules and regulations concerning the hygiene and follow the standard and rules laid down by the government in this respect. The government should also ensure effective rules and see that these are strictly enforced.
- 2- To adopt measure to increase production is not prohibited under the Shariah but it is desirable. However, to use manner and chemical that are detrimental to human health is not desirable.
- 3- Use of chemical and other unnatural means to get the fruits ripened before time or to make them look attractive or heavy in weight is also not a desirable approach.
- 4- To apply artificial methods to increase production of milk is permissible. But it should not seriously hurt the animal or the milk so obtained becomes injurious to human health.
- 5- It is not permissible to feed the Halal animals on prohibited food but if such food is given to these animals, their meat will be permissible to consume, provided the symptoms of filth are not visible from their body.
- 6- If such ingredients are used in the food products which are extremely injurious to human health; such an act will not be permissible.

♦ 24th Fiqhi Seminar, Ochira, Kerala 1-3, March 2015